SUNDAY WORLD WANTS WORK WONDERS.

ALLEGED THIEF IS NABBED
BY REAL "OFFICER 666"

Policeman Feels Hand in Salary Pocket and Takes Owner to Station.

"Officer 666" in real life is Charles Collins of Traffic A, big and blond and an athlete. He dozed while sitting on a bench of the uptown 14th Street station of the Seventh Avenue subway at 2:30 A. M. to-day waiting for a train home.

A hand in the pocket where reposed his newly collected salary aroused him. He grasped the hand and proceeded to give the owner of it a good trouncing. Then he arrested him, despite his excuse that his hand had accidentally struck the policeman while he was folding a newspaper.

On the way to the Charles Street Station the prisoner is alleged to have admitted he was trying to pick the policeman's pocket and to have offered him a bribe to release him. He described himself as John Novack, forty-one, No. 220 East 18th Street, a waiter.

INWOOD'S FOURTH OF JULY.

People of Dyckman Section Will Have a Patriotic Blowout.

The people of Inwood, the Dyckman section of Manhattan, have solved the problem as to what to do and where to go for the Fourth by planning an all-day outing, afternoon and evening, band concert by two city bands, a series of athletic games and patriotic exercises at beautiful Inham Park, formerly the Inham estate, between Broadway and Spuyten Duyvil valley.

There will be dancing on the lawn in the evening. Daniel W. Lenihan, President of the Inwood Parents' Association, is Chairman of the Committee in charge.

ROBBINS AT DELMONICO'S.

E. L. C. Robbins, proprietor of a chain of downtown restaurants, became proprietor to-day of Delmonico's, which has been through a receivership. While the Delmonico estate retains large holdings in the famous place at Fifth Avenue and 44th Street, Mr. Robbins will direct its affairs. He said he planned a revival of gayety despite the dry spell.

NABS 20 MEN
ACCUSED OF GETTING
$1,000,000 IN LOOT

1056 Lafayette Avenue, Brooklyn; William A. Homer, forty-three, of No. 710 Fulton Street, Brooklyn; William Brogan, twenty-one, of No. 324 Monroe Street, Manhattan; John McAuley, thirty-four, of No. 796 Manhattan Avenue, Brooklyn, and Walter Buell, twenty, of No. 630 61st Street, Brooklyn.

The others pleaded not guilty and were remanded to the Tombs without bail. Their trial dates will be announced later unless they plead guilty to the indictments.

As soon as the men were locked up in the Tombs two more of them decided to plead guilty. They were returned to court, their pleas registered and they too were remanded for sentence July 9. They are:

John Flannery, twenty-four, of No. 499 East 141st Street, Manhattan, and Herman Goldstein, twenty-one, of No. 365 Madison Street, Manhattan.

Arthur S. Fagan, a detective, with offices at No. 1135 Broadway, worked up the evidence against the prisoners. After he had obtained the evidence, the police and District Attorney were called into the case and the trap was sprung without one of the prisoners having the slightest idea that anything out of the ordinary was under way.

According to the story told by Detective Fagan, a policeman strayed into the shop of a shoemaker in Brooklyn two months ago and saw the back room piled up with bags of flour. The incident impressed him, and he asked questions and learned that the shoemaker had bought the flour from strangers at reduced prices.

Reporting back to his superiors, the news travelled along in police channels until it reached the Standard Milling Company, holding company for the Hecker-Jones-Jewell Milling Company. Consultation was held with Sullivan and Cronwell, attorneys for the company, and they engaged Detective Fagan to expose the plot and gain evidence for the prosecution of the guilty.

Fagan opened a fully stocked grocery store at No. 58 First Avenue under the name of the Royal Grocery Company. He hardly had the doors open when he received a call from a driver of one of the milling company's wagons offering to sell him flour at greatly reduced prices. The driver was given an order. When he returned a few hours later with the goods he was paid part of the purchase price agreed upon in marked bills and told to return for the balance due.

The driver was shadowed and it is declared that detectives saw him give the money to a man in charge of loading the shipments at the mill. He returned for the money due from the "Royal Grocery Company" and was seized. Not until he had divulged everything of value was he released and then he was not allowed to go back among his fellow workers. Instead it was reported that he was sick and would not be able to get back to work for a week or more.

In the meantime detectives were hot on the trail of those exposed by his confession, and when everything had been cinched, District Attorney Swann assigned his assistant, Lewis Abrams, to the case, and it went to the Grand Jury last Friday. The mass of evidence was so great that it required all of Friday and most of yesterday to complete the hearing. Then the indictments were returned and the raid followed this morning.

According to the evidence laid before the Grand Jury by Detective Fagan, there was a conspiracy of the employees to steal the company's products for the past five years. The loaders have control of picking out all orders for the drivers to deliver. It is charged that they were in agreement to deliver duplicate orders to the drivers and that they divided the proceeds. They sold more than $200,000 worth of goods every year, the police say.

Immediately after the accused were arrested a number of drivers employed at the place went on strike. The men who drive motor trucks refused to carry the goods and the delivery force is said to have quit work.

New York Woman Shot and Killed in Los Angeles.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 1.—Mrs. Marie Regazzini, who recently came from New York City, was shot and killed yesterday at the home of her employer, Nicholas Tancredi, a wealthy Italian resident of Pasadena. Tancredi was found in the same room with a probably fatal bullet wound through his head and a revolver by his side.
